The OHIO ALUMNUS

June - 1946

From the Editor's Desk . . .

WHEW! The editor calls attention to the fact, unnecessarily, perhaps, that this is the final issue of The Ohio Alumnus for the 1945-1946 year. The publication schedule calls for nine issues to appear, normally, in the months of October to June, inclusive.

The difficulties of producing the magazine during recent years have been pointed out previously. Some of these difficulties will persist and are beyond the control of the editor. Right now, for instance, there is a question as to whether a new supply either of mailing wrappers or of envelopes for the magazine can be obtained by the time they will be needed. Other difficulties, by means of proposed adjustments in the work of the Alumni Office, may be overcome to some extent. A valiant effort will be made.

Beginning with the October number—the first issue of the new year—members of the Alumni Association may expect to receive their magazines by the 15th of each month of issue. There are still hazards to this promise, but it will be carried out if humanly possible. Twice during the past year engravings were missent in the mails with a resultant delay of more than a week in each case. Then there are numerous and unforeseeable hitches in the editor's work schedule.

As Alumni Secretary and University Editor the writer is responsible for promoting alumni activities, giving overall supervision to the keeping of thousands of records, conducting correspondence with alumni (a field of work which has expanded many fold in recent years), receiving visitors to the Alumni Office, attending to the special needs and requests of alumni constituents, editing the Alumnus, editing the university's general catalog and summer school bulletin, and assisting with other publications of an official nature. These and many unclassifiable duties combine to keep your humble servant out of the mischief that is supposed to come readily to idle hands.

Despite the fact that many of the foregoing activities cannot be regulated as to time and frequently pile up, it is the editor's earnest hope that he will be able to keep abreast of the times with his magazine, and that he will not again be under the unhappy necessity of reporting events that transpired in June, let us say, in an issue bearing an April date.

The complaints of readers have been few; the expressions of friendly interest, many. For the latter, thanks.

TICKETS As reported on page 5 members of the Ohio University Alumni Association will have the first chance at reserved seat tickets for the home games of the 1946 football season, provided orders—accompanied by checks—are received before September 1. The exact location of seats cannot be specified by the purchaser, but the early birds will be assured of the prized 50-yard line ducats, while others will have the best available seats assigned to them in the order of receipt of their ticket requests.

GOING UP The associate director of the Ohio University Fund, Inc. has reported that, to date, 57 persons have contributed a total of $13,108.00 for an average gift of $229.91 each. The range is from $5 to $2,000.

No goal has been set for this year. Far more important than a money goal is the percentage of participation. The aim of the trustees is to make every alumnus aware to the Fund potentialities and to develop within him the practice of giving annually to his alma mater.

COVER A soundmirror is used to make recordings for the purpose of revealing to Ohio University students any speech difficulties they may have. See story on next page. Shown in the cover picture are (left foreground) Fred Specht, a sophomore from Mart's Ferry, and Wayne Smith, a Lorain freshman, who are having their voices recorded. Miss Barbara Pritchard, McConnellsville, student assistant in the speech and hearing clinic is the supervisor.

ROOMS Reservation lists for all university-controlled housing for this fall have been closed for some time. Students may now apply for admission only if they have definite assurance of a room in private quarters. Admission to the Branches in Chillicothe, Portsmouth, and Zanesville is as yet unrestricted.

Clinic Pioneers In New Field

Have you ever wondered why Ohio University's graduates and students speak clearly and with better than average articulation?

Much of the credit should go to the effective methods used in diagnosing the various types of speech deficiencies, such as stuttering, lisping and other articulatory problems at the university's speech clinic.

Credit should be given, too, to the new required course in fundamentals of speech which was started last fall.

And now Ohio University's speech department is pioneering another field in helping to alleviate speech defects in elementary and secondary schools by setting up an extension course in speech correction for classroom teachers.

In conjunction with recent legislation allowing the state to pay from $750 to $1000 toward the salary of a teacher qualifying as a speech correctionist, the extension course was organized under the direction of Arthur C. LaFollette, instructor in dramatic art and speech and head of the clinic. The project is supervised by Dr. Elizabeth Andersch, assistant professor of dramatic art and speech.

In addition, a Saturday morning class for Athens teachers was begun. Mr. LaFollette is certain it is the first of its kind in the state of Ohio.

So enthusiastic have some teachers become that they hope to eventually qualify themselves as full-time speech correction instructors.

This course is the latest development in the six-year-old speech clinic, organized in 1940 under the supervision of Dr. Ruth Beckey Irwin, now head of the speech correction program in the Division of Special Education of the State of Ohio. The first course in speech correction was instituted in 1937 under Arthur J. Bronstein, but it was not until 1940 that the clinic operated as a well-developed, campus-wide service.

The clinic now has two headquarters, one at Rufus Putnam Hall for the elementary school children under Dr. Andersch's direction, and at Wilson Hall for university students under Mr. LaFollette's supervision. Dr. Andersch and the clinic methods class did a piece of superior work all year at the Rufus Putnam training school clinic. "The correction program at Rufus Putnam was the most successful of any ever attempted in that school," the director adds.

These two clinics are in operation regularly throughout the week. In tals of speech is required for all freshmen. Students revealing defective speech are referred to the clinic and are not given a grade in the course until they have had remedial training and have obtained approval of the clinic directors. Between 75 and 100 students come to the clinic twice each week.

In addition, all students planning to teach are required to come to the speech clinic before taking practice teaching. All speech difficulties must be remedied before a student is permitted to engage in the student teaching program.

The clinic treats speech defects ranging from stuttering to spastic paralysis and cleft palate speech. Foreign accents and colloquial dialects also are corrected. Defects are of two kinds: organic, caused by actual physical abnormalities, and functional, caused simply by failure to speak understandably.

Hard-of-hearing patients also are treated in the clinic for speech difficulties incurred by inability to hear speech correctly. These patients are fitted with hearing aids, taught lip reading, and given help in improving their speech.

A student can major in speech correction for either a bachelor's or master's degree. The School of Dramatic Art and Speech, of which Dr. Earl E. Siegfred, dean of the College of Fine Arts, is acting head, offers major work in five fields. In addition to speech correction, a major may be obtained in public address, play production, technical theater, and radio.

After graduating with a major in speech correction, a student is prepared to teach speech in public schools with emphasis on correction work, or to become a speech correctionist in a public or private clinic.

Ohio University's speech clinic has good equipment, and more is on order. The present equipment includes a "sound mirror," which records the voice on an endless steel tape, playing it back to the listener at any time.

Sound Discrimination Taught Through Ear Training

addition, a Saturday clinic is held for patients from Athens and outlying areas, with people coming from Logan, Pomeroy, Marietta and other adjacent towns for treatment.

During the two semesters of 1945-46, nearly 150 patients took advantage of the free clinics. The majority of the patients were university students, most of whom came to the clinic at the suggestion of one of their instructors or as a result of the speech examination.

The clinic has a unique setup for reaching all students, effective because of the comparatively small size of the university. All entering students are required to come to the speech and hearing clinic for a test. Those who show some speech problem are counseled concerning proper training.

New Officers Elected

As expected, the persons nominated for offices in the Ohio University Alumni Association for 1946-1947 were duly elected in the subsequent balloting. The vote was conducted by mail this year for the first time. Only one "ticket" was presented by the nominating committee, which was headed by Dr. Hiram Roy Wilson, '96, Athens. In addition to the four principal officers, a seven-member executive committee was elected.

Although substitute names could be written in at the pleasure of Association members, this was done in only a few instances, and only in the cases of executive committeemen.

The new president is George M. Brown, '31, a Cleveland attorney, who was elevated from the vice presidency. Mr. Brown succeeds C. Don McVay, '15, Leroy, president of the Ohio Farmers Insurance Company and a trustee of Ohio University.

The Cleveland man, a graduate of the Western Reserve Law School, is a member of the law firm of Sanborn & Brown, located in the Bulkley Building. Early in his legal practice he served as assistant to Judge Harry L. Eastman, aiding in the organization of Cleveland's Juvenile Court over which the widely-known jurist presides. Brown is a national officer of his social fraternity, and is one of the founders of the Cleveland Bobcat Club. The accompanying picture is not a recent one.

While at Ohio University Mr. Brown won All-Buckeye and All-Ohio honors in football. Later he served as line coach at Western Reserve University, while for years he has been widely recognized as a football official. The eldest of his three sons, Don Peden Brown, was named for Ohio University's gridiron mentor.

Dr. J. Fremont Bateman, '22, superintendent of the Columbus State Hospital and a former state commissioner of mental diseases, was elected vice president of the Association for the coming year.

Clark E. Williams, '21, and William H. Fenzel, '18, were elected executive secretary and treasurer, respectively. Mr. Fenzel is an associate professor of accounting at Ohio University.

The seven members of the executive committee, as nominated and elected, are: Frank H. Palmer, '12, Columbus; Frieda F. Chapman, '22, Youngstown; Everett M. Starr, '20, Huntington, W. Va.; Judge Lewis H. Miller, '13, Ripley, W. Va.; Mrs. Jean Adams Morton, '14; Paul E. Kimes, '28; and Doris M. Sponseller, '29. The last three are residents of Athens.

The tentative date for the first meeting of the official body is October 25, the day before Homecoming.

Commencement Speaker Walters

August Graduates Will Hear Walters in Final Exercises

Formal graduation exercises for approximately 100 seniors will be held at 10:00 a.m. Saturday morning, August 10, as a finale to the major session of the 1946 Summer School. Post sessions varying in length from three to five weeks will follow, but with a very limited attendance.

The speaker for the August commencement will be Dr. Raymond Walters, president of the University of Cincinnati and a widely known authority on college and university administration. There will be no baccalaureate program.

Dr. Walters has been president of the Cincinnati school since 1932, prior to which he served in administrative and teaching capacities at both Swarthmore College and Lehigh University. He is a senator of Phi Beta Kappa and a member of a number of national agencies and associations in the field of education.

If there are no casualties among the candidates for graduation the August section will bring to a total of near 350 the number of members of the Class of 1946. Of this number 35 received their degree in February, 215 in June, and the remainder will come in August. A few degrees will be conferred at the end of the post sessions, but without benefit of formal exercises.

FOOTBALL TICKET PRIORITY

MEMBERS TO GET CHOICE SEATS

Through an arrangement with the Athletic Department paid-up members of the Ohio University Alumni Association will receive preferential treatment in the assignment of reserved seats for the 1946 Football Season.

Each graduate or former student whose Association membership is certified as paid up by the Alumni Office and who places his order for tickets before September 1 may secure a maximum of six tickets for each game. The seats, to be reserved before any single-game tickets are made available to non-members and the general public, will be located in the center section of the West Stand (the Ohio U. side of the stadium) and in successive sections southward. Orders will be stamped with the date and hour of receipt and tickets selected accordingly, beginning with the center section which includes the 50-yard line seats. The only exception to the foregoing policy will be made in the case of season tickets, the sale of which will open concurrently with the above (August 12).

This notice goes to non-members, as well as members, in the hope that the former will join the Association, get the priority, and help the alumni program.

The Alumni Association year begins on July 1.

OHIO'S BOBCATS will open the 1946 gridiron season with a home game, September 28, against the "Thoroughbreds" of Murray (Ky.) State Teachers College. In other games to be played in Ohio Stadium, the Bobcats will meet Muskingum, Oct. 12; Miami in the big Homecoming Game, Oct. 26; Baldwin-Wallace, Nov. 9; and Dayton, Nov. 16, in the Dad's Day Game.

On the road the Pedemmen will encounter Western (Mich.) State Teachers College at Kalamazoo, Oct. 5; Cincinnati at Cincinnati, Oct. 19; Ohio Wesleyan at Delaware, Nov. 2; and Xavier at Cincinnati, Nov. 23.

A squad of approximately 50 men, five of them lettermen, is expected to report for the initial fall practice on Sept. 3. Concerning prospects for the coming season Head Coach Don Peden will say nothing except that "the team will be better than last year—and so will the opponents."

Last year's gridiron outfit, the first since the early war years, was composed almost entirely of inexperienced and untried men, but they developed rapidly, winning decisive victories over two strong opponents in the closing games of the season. One of the state's leaders, Baldwin-Wallace, was defeated 33-7, while the West Virginia "Mountaineers" were blanked 14-0 on their home field. In an earlier game the potent Cincinnati "Bearcats" were edged out 20-19.

THREE NEW NAMES will appear on the Bobcat coaching roster this fall. Kermit A. Blosser, '32, former coach at Columbus South High School; James E. Snyder, '42, coach at Canton Lehman High School; and Frank J. Szalay, '42, have been appointed assistant coaches. All three were stellar athletes in their campus days.

Replacing Harold E. Wise, '28, and Russell J. Crane, Blosser and Snyder will assist with both football and basketball. Szalay will assist with football. Wise was recently named associate director of the Ohio University Fund, Inc. Crane left this summer to join the University of Richmond coaching and physical education staff. Head Coach Don Peden and Line Coach Bill Trautwein will continue to head up the gridiron coaching staff and strategy board.

Kermit Blosser was named All-Buckeye end in football and National Intercollegiate wrestling champion while at Ohio University. Jimmie Snyder starred at halfback in football and played guard and forward on the Bobcat basketball squad, winning a place on the All-Ohio basketball team in 1937. Frankie Szalay was an outstanding center on Ohio's prewar football team. All three are war veterans.

SWIMMING (see picture) has proved to be one of the most popular and beneficial methods used at Ohio University to rehabilitate disabled veterans.

That's the observation of A. H. "Jack" Rhoads, '29, swimming coach and assistant professor of physical welfare, in discussing the various steps taken to aid these students in regaining their former strength, confidence, and ability to carry on in a normal manner.

The comprehensive voluntary program involved 75 veterans during the spring semester, many of whom were wounded in defense of their country. It was started when the first medical discharges came back to the campus in 1944 and has steadily increased in scope.

"What is important in the whole swimming program is that the injured parts are aided, the muscles re-educated, confidence is regained, and the student maintains a decent physical condition," says Rhoads, who conducted a similar program during the war for the Navy at Quantico, Va., and at Asbury Park, N. J. A veteran of three years service in the Naval Reserve, he returned to the physical welfare department faculty last winter.

Disabled veterans with only one leg, some with withered legs and arms, some with vertebrae fused by shrapnel, others with eye, lung and heart injuries—are all taking swimming because they want to and think it helps them.

get muscles operating again for the two types of students enrolled, those with permanent injuries and those with only temporary disabilities.

The art of fencing has been taken up by a number of veterans. Riding bicycles, using rowing machines, lifting dumbbells, and various corrective exercises have been of value.

Supervised by Carl T. Nessley, assistant professor of physical welfare, fencing is taught by Edward deRobert, an Italian student who learned to fence in Europe before coming to Ohio University recently to study agriculture.

Joe Trepp, associate professor of physical welfare, has had a major part in organizing and conducting the adapted activities program. He has worked principally with groups in special exercises in the remedial exercise room and in the teaching of games.

Thor Olson, '27, wrestling coach and assistant professor of physical welfare, has carried out the physical therapy program of massage, whirlpool baths, and heat lamps.

The rehabilitation steps have done a lot to do away with a feeling of self-consciousness. Students just beginning to swim feel self-conscious, but there are boys who now come in the water and throw off their artificial limbs without the earlier signs of embarrassment. In a few lessons many of them are diving off the board.

In case a veteran does not want a part in the voluntary special programs, he tries the regular physical welfare course. The special program, however, has had the highest attendance record of any in the department.

"We fit the exercise to the man," remarks Jack Rhoads. "One of our spastic cases had faulty motor learning so that swimming was difficult. We devised special strokes for him and now he gets about the pool handily. Another veteran, with a silver plate in his arm and with his biceps shot away, has improved his motor ability 100 per cent in learning to swim."

Dr. E. H. Hudson, director of the Ohio University Health Service, talks with each of the disabled men and recommends an individual type of physical treatment. He makes a regular check to see how the students are progressing and alters the types of exercise as the students respond.
